

Classroom Track Selection Tool

If your child...

- Thrives in an environment in which he/she is with peers similar in age and social and academic maturity
- Would enjoy a smaller class environment with structured grouping throughout the day
- Thrives in a cooperative learning structure, including facilitation and direction from the classroom teacher
- Benefits from diversifying peer groups and varied teachers over the course of time
- Benefits from encouragement in learning responsibility, as each student participates in his/her classroom job and role
- Generally fits into typical birthday maturity level
- Benefits from relatively standard pacing with subjects
- Needs a more structured setting as opposed to a flexible one
- Often requires adult direction and needs help completing independent assignments
- Focuses best in a quiet and orderly environment
- Succeeds in a learning environment that utilizes ability grouping versus skill grouping

you might consider the Traditional classroom.

If your child...

- Thrives in a “brother or sister” role to help nurture, encourage, or challenge his/her academics and or maturity
- Would enjoy a larger class environment with structured movement and flexible grouping throughout the day
- Thrives in a cooperative learning structure, including peer mentoring and tutoring
- Benefits from longevity in relationships
- Enjoys a sense of responsibility, as each student participates in his/her classroom job and role
- May not fit into typical birthday maturity level, either behind or ahead
- Benefits from lingering on a subject longer
- Needs to be stretched or enjoys flexibility
- Is a relatively independent learner and self-starter
- Focuses easily when multiple activities are going on in an orderly fashion
- Succeeds in a learning environment that utilizes skill grouping versus ability grouping
